

AUTHOR'S REFLECTION

I may not know your pain. I may not have walked your paths or lived your story. But I, too, have walked a path-one that many cannot even imagine.

I have one message: God always has a purpose, a plan, for all people in all places. If we dare to trust in His love, power, and wisdom, He is able to do exceedingly, abundantly above all that we can ask, think, or even dare imagine-according to His power, love, and wisdom at work in us.

That is why... something always happens.

DEDICATION

I gratefully dedicate this to the memory of my father, my brother-David Olaleye Adaramola, my sisters-Olajumoke Adaramola, Foluke Akinlabi, and all the friends and family who came my way to be blessings of love and hope.

They left-not when I was ready, but when God was.

Most importantly, to my father-David Akindele Adaramola, a teacher in Ayetoro, who was blessed with triplets and never scorned the blessing, never gave up. From day one, it was a battle to save us, and he fought until his death, living and giving his life to help others.

All I wish is that I had woken up earlier to his call to focus a bit more on myself. That is what I now do-through self-reflection and by doing what I, like him, love most: helping those who may seem to have nothing to give back, but who are worth every labour of love.

This gives me hope-that we can make this world a better place, one person at a time, by making something happen for one another.

FATHERING WITHOUT FEAR

A Memoir That Defies Every Boundary

"If You give me my life back, I'll serve You until I'm seventy-five."

The prayer of an eight-year-old boy who died... and came back.

But some promises cost more than you know.

THEY CALLED US THE MIRACLE TRIPLETS.

Born at 27 weeks in 1977 Lagos. Too early. Too poor. Too impossible.

Three became two. Two became legends. But legends come with a price.

LAGOS. AKURE. LONDON.

Three cities. Three fires. Three chances to disappear.

He survived them all. Not everyone did.

"Something always happens."

David used to say it when hope felt like a lie.

He said it until 2003.

Until he couldn't say it anymore.

Until the brother who was never a cousin became a ghost.

Until the words became prophecy.

WHAT THEY DON'T TELL YOU ABOUT MIRACLES:

They attract darkness like light attracts moths.

They make you a target for things you can't see.

They cost you people you can't afford to lose.

A grandmother who spoke to spirits...

A sister whose death unlocked visions...

A romance that nearly killed him...

A marriage that tried to erase him...

A son he's still fighting to father...

And a brother whose last words still echo in the silence.

"Where was God when David died?"

The question that broke his faith.

The question that forged his purpose.

The question that led him to a courtroom in London...

Fighting for a son who carries the name of kings.

Fighting against a system designed to make fathers disappear.

SOME STORIES CHOOSE YOU.

This one chose him at birth.

Marked him at eight.

Nearly destroyed him at thirty.

And won't let him go.

"This isn't just survival. It's resurrection."

Every time they tried to bury him, he rose.

Every time they tried to silence him, he spoke.

Every time they tried to separate him from his son...

He remembered the promise.

THE MEMOIR THAT BECOMES A LOVE STORY

THE LOVE STORY THAT BECOMES A LEGEND

THE LEGEND THAT BECOMES A MOVEMENT

FATHERING WITHOUT FEAR

When miracles come with a price

And the price is everything

But the promise is eternal

He didn't just survive the fire.

He became the flame that refuses to be extinguished.

"Because no matter what comes next - Something always happens. And by the grace of God... So do I."

ABRAHAM OF LONDON

Miracle Child. Marked Man. Devoted Father.

The Brother Who Remembers.

The Father Who Refuses to Disappear.

COMING SOON

The story they thought they knew.

The man they tried to erase.

The father who fathered without fear.

Even when fear was all he had left.

ONE-PAGE SYNOPSIS

Fathering Without Fear is the deeply personal and spiritually rich memoir of Abraham of London—a miracle child turned misunderstood teen, turned kingdom-minded strategist and father navigating spiritual warfare, systemic injustice, and silent heartbreak.

From his miraculous birth as part of a celebrated set of triplets in 1977 Lagos, to the deep emotional losses of siblings and friends in childhood, Abraham's life unfolds as a story of divine calling and repeated trials. His early encounter with Christ through the prophetic influence of his grandmother and his first spiritual awakening in Akure form the foundation of a life shaped by both vision and fire.

The book follows Abraham through formative experiences: escaping harsh conditions in boarding school, championing campus politics at the University of Lagos, enduring strange and spiritual romantic entanglements, and eventually moving to the UK-only to face one of the most painful seasons of his life.

After marrying a woman who would later turn a foe, Abraham found himself trapped in a legal and immigration nightmare: denied the right to work, blocked from public funds, and fighting for access to his British son.

Instead of folding, he fought-with strategy and scripture. Through tears and testimonies, Fathering Without Fear weaves personal, political, legal, and spiritual narratives into a single story: a man who refused to disappear.

This is a memoir for the underestimated, the faithful, and the men who keep showing up. It is at once a father's letter, a spiritual blueprint, and a prophetic declaration.

He didn't survive by luck. He stayed by grace.

And because something always happens-so does he.
